Q: Play Framework - displaying image from database I'm trying to display an image in my jsp. When I try this: I get this error: How can I solve this? I'm using an image of type: BigInteger Database is in PostgreSQL A: I don't think you can use an abstract class as a resource. You must use one of your concrete type image class. Can you provide an concrete example of your IsolatedImages class? For now, this should work : @(image : BigInteger) Sensitization to quinine following repeated administration to humans. The overall incidence of quinine hypersensitivity reactions in Belgium is about 5%. It has been suggested that repeated administration in the same person may induce tolerance (pre-challenge) and, therefore, increase the risk of hypersensitivity after future administration. We conducted a double-blind placebo-controlled trial in which 18 patients received a loading dose of 500 mg of quinine hydrochloride orally and a maintenance dose of 250 mg every 2 h for 4 h. The level of quinine-specific IgE before and after the protocol was determined by skin testing, and individual peak quinine-specific IgE was determined. Nine patients showed specific IgE increases after the protocol. In the majority of patients, the peak quinine-specific IgE concentration was higher than 1 microg/l. A major drawback of this study is that only one skin test was used to determine sensitivity. Therefore, the sensitivity threshold could not be assessed. However, the data suggest that patients who were nonreactive before the protocol may become sensitized to quinine.The crypto-tech road show sees New York State Governor Andrew Cuomo deliver a keynote speech to a full house and electrified crypto conference at the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) for the first time, while other tech giants including IBM, Baidu and Microsoft add blockchain and artificial intelligence to their virtual conference. Now that Microsoft is out of the way, it's fair to say that Apple has (nearly) won the tablet war. Sure, you can buy a lot of Android tablets these days, but for most people who are serious about using tablets, they're going to be running iOS. And, of course, because of that, the question with Apple is "When will it go down for the count?" As it turns out, the answer is, not soon enough. The iPad Mini is about to have its 2012 refresh—and that could be your last chance to get one. For those who want to use their iOS devices in car-mounted apps and perhaps have them hooked to their HDTV, you're out of luck. Apple's 5-inch "Retina" display that features high-resolution, high-pixel-count (326 pixels per inch) screens. The iPad Mini's display looks great on the iPad—it's no surprise that those bezels would be cut down to match a larger screen. But it's not very practical to use the iPad Mini in the car, much less connect it to your HDTV. Meanwhile, the iPad has already been refreshed and is now, at this moment in time, the top-selling tablet on the market. Apple has sold 65 million iPads, a figure that's largely ignored by many, and the original iPad is now the fourth-best-selling PC on the market, according to WPC, a market research firm. Rival tablets from companies like Samsung and Asus have more power, more RAM, bigger displays, and even more bells and whistles—but Apple's tablet is still the most popular. Apple has been doing this in the past. With the first generation of the iPhone—a device that didn't have an app store or any other apps aside from the App Store—Apple created a device that sold like crazy, winning both the hype and the market. Then it topped it off with the much-awaited but highly-anticipated iPad. Whether or not it will be successful in that role this year is to be determined, but the fact remains: the iPad has now won the tablet war. Apple has set the bar, and the only ones who have been left standing are the ones who can set the bar even higher. It won't be long until the iPad is the best, if not the only, tablet on the market. And when that happens, it will be the beginning
